Before Your Dental Visit

A little preparation can make your appointment easier and help your dental team understand what you need. For a routine visit, you generally do not need to do anything complicated.

Bring your information

Have your contact details, current medication list, and relevant dental or medical information available if your dental team asks for it.

Know what you want to discuss

Write down any concerns, questions, or changes you have noticed with your teeth or gums so you remember them during the visit.

Arrive a little early

Allow extra time for check-in, forms, and questions—especially if this is your first visit.

Follow appointment instructions

If your clinic gives you specific preparation instructions for a particular procedure, follow those instructions rather than relying on a general checklist.

What happens during a routine checkup?

A routine dental visit may include an examination of your teeth and gums, a professional cleaning when appropriate, and a conversation about your oral health. Your dental professional may recommend additional services based on what they find.

Helpful tip: Tell your dental team about pain, sensitivity, bleeding, swelling, broken teeth, or other concerns—even if the symptom seems minor.

Choosing the right appointment

If you are unsure which service to select, choose the option that best matches your main reason for visiting. You can also contact the dental team before booking if you need help choosing an appointment type.

After Your Visit

Your dental team may provide instructions specific to the service you received. Follow those instructions first. If you have questions or unexpected symptoms after treatment, contact your dental provider for guidance.

Keeping your smile healthy between visits

- Brush your teeth regularly with fluoride toothpaste and use a technique recommended by your dental professional.
- Clean between your teeth regularly using floss or another method recommended for you.
- Limit frequent sugary snacks and drinks.
- Keep regular dental appointments based on the schedule recommended by your dental professional.

When to contact a dental professional promptly

Contact a dental professional promptly if you experience significant or persistent tooth pain, facial or mouth swelling, a broken or knocked-out tooth, bleeding that does not stop, or another urgent dental concern.

Emergency note: Severe swelling that affects breathing or swallowing, or a serious facial injury, may require emergency medical care.

Questions you can ask your dental team

- What did you find during my examination?
- What treatment do you recommend, and why?
- Are there alternatives I should consider?
- What should I expect after treatment?
- When should I schedule my next visit?
